

UNLOADING GRASS CLIPPINGS to be used for mulch at a new wildlife sanctuary south of Sheridan is James Wynn of Eugene, Ore., left, and Larry Gustafson of Big Horn. Jeanne and Dale Fuller are donating two acres of land near the Big Horn "Y" intersection for a wildlife sanctuary that will be open for public viewing. Volunteers on Saturday and Sunday planted native trees and shrubs. Coordinator Vistara Parham said officials with the Wyoming Game and Fish Department and U.S. Soil Conservation Service provided input. Wynn, who teaches ecological agriculture in Eugene, said he was passing through the area and stopped to help with the project. (Press photo by Robert Waggener)
